Florals for spring?

It may not be groundbreaking, but at London's restaurants, the botanical touch goes a long way.

See the patchy British weather through rose-tinted glasses at these culinary hotspots, where springtime is bringing flower power to the tastes and the sights of diners.

From cherry blossom cornucopias to horticultural afternoon teas, check out the London eateries in full bloom this spring.

Michelin-starred Indian restaurant Amaya are also celebrating Chelsea Flower Show with a special menu, where floral flourishes will top specially designed dishes including a cabbage and noodle salad and a fig cheesecake, with cocktails including a creme de violette-infused violets crush. Keep an eye out in May for a floral display over the restaurant's entrance, as the eatery joins in with the Belgravia in Bloom festival.
